What is Palliative care?

The combination of active and compassionate therapies aimed at reducing the symptoms and suffering of individuals and families facing a life-threatening terminal illness or chronic debilitating disease.

If an individual is diagnosed with such an illness, palliative care may be able to assist them, whether or not they are receiving specific anti-disease treatment. Most people find that their quality of life is improved when symptoms and suffering have been addressed.

It strives to meet physical, psychological, social and spiritual needs while remaining sensitive to personal, cultural and religious values, beliefs and practices.

Palliative Care

has been further defined by the World Health Organisation as, “the active, total care of patients and their families by a multi-professional team when the patient's disease is no longer responsive to curative treatment”.

Palliative Care should not be confused with intensive care where active effort on the patients condition is made to 'cure' him of his disease, but it's a form of passive treatment, understanding the incurable nature of the disease. The patient is made comfortable in the best possible way, either through medications (allopathic or alternative medical therapies) and / or other supportive therapies.
